JERUSALEM AUTHOR AND PUBLISHER ANNOUNCE LATEST RELEASE
On Becoming a Special Parent: A Mini Support Group in a Book
Published by French Creek Press

JERUSALEM -- French Creek Press is pleased to announce the release of On Becoming a Special Parent – A Mini-Support Group in a Book, an uplifting and practical handbook for parents of children with extra needs. Written in hints and easy-to-read suggestions, On Becoming guides parents through the everyday struggles and frustrations of living with the special child. Included is advice for the non-parent, to help them recognize and be sensitive to what the families are experiencing.

The author, Marcia R. Turner (previously published under the name Routburg), struggled through the medical maze while raising her daughter, who was born with severe brain damage. Wanting to help others avoid the maze, she compiled On Becoming, culling expert advice from various organizations for the disabled, physicians, therapists, and other parents.

- The mother is taught how to focus on her and her family's life cycle.
- Professionals are advised to accept the client at his or her own level.
- "Disability etiquette" educates all how to act and speak with individuals with disabilities.

Ms. Turner is the founder of the Chicago-based organization Keshet, a provider of many services for children with special needs. She has been a guest lecturer for community groups, and has been interviewed on radio and television.

Easy to order through Amazon.com, Amazon:OnBecoming, and through the French Creek Press website, <http://www.frenchcreekpress.com/our-authors/marcia-r-turner/>. eBook readers can purchase through the above website.
